Summary

As a former musician, I feel that work on tech is a form of art. Sometimes I solve complex problems with simple solutions, whether it's writing a clean and performant code, following good architectural designs, or making an innovative experience. I always feel like I've just finished a masterpiece that I should share with the world.

I've felt that after working with my past team for almost four years, staying together after an acquisition, I've reached a point where I need a new challenge to continue growing.
